GENERAL MARKET REPORT.

NEW-YORK, July 20, 1866.—COTTON—There was something of an unexpected tone to the cotton market, with the introduction of Wall Street, and the market was suddenly taken by surprise, but the influence of the strong Liverpool market had a quickening effect on the later deliveries, which were still at some point above the original standard. This market was directly credited to the cable address showing unexpected activity in the spot trade at Liverpool and considerable strength, especially in the cotton and wool advance and quiet. The better feeling abroad was reported by private cables, as due to buying English spinners, who said good news from Liverpool. Day's advance from Manchester, however, were quiet. While the foreign advances were satisfactory, the home reports regarding the buying in spinners continued unsatisfactory. American spinners, however, were quiet in the summer months, but this year business is flat. Crop accounts were seen at variance to-day. The reports of short sales were given in the market, and in others. The trade appears to believe in the large crop theory. There is, however, some nervousness in the situation and a desire not to move. There is a lack of confidence shown in the future market, but to what extent this is true it is difficult to state. The dealings in the market last hours of the day were still very slow and the price advance was kept down by Saturday's quotations. Total sales were $4,800 bushels. Dispatches from Atlanta were quite favorable, and in other cities were also good. The advice from the Carolinas indicate considerable injury from rains. Texas reported 102 bales of new cotton at Galveston, and from New Orleans 100 bales. The damage is claimed will result in an early movement of the crop, and some dealers are looking for this movement to assume considerable proportions in August. Opening of the market and closing bales the previous night and last year:
